

Australia's top trending cat breeds revealed

There's no doubt about it – Australians are smitten with kittens and cats! But which breeds are we looking for?

Top 10 trending cat breeds

We analysed Google searches of 73 cat breeds and types (pedigree and mixed) to reveal our top 10 breeds nationally, and by state and territory. All top breeds featured are 'pedigree registered' breeds.²

#1 Maine Coon

The winner is... the Maine Coon! The Maine Coon took out the #1 spot in search interest nationally, and in every state and territory. In 2021, there were 621,000 searches for Maine Coon, almost double that of the nearest competitor.

A large, semi-longhaired cat, the Maine Coon is big-boned with a rugged, muscular appearance. But despite her size, she's sweet and gentle, and can easily adapt to any environment as long as she has room to exercise.

#2 Bengal

The striking Bengal nabbed the #2 position nationally, and in every state and territory except for Victoria. With 434,000 searches to its name, there's plenty of interest in this breed.

The Bengal has the exotic spotted or marbled appearance of a small forest-dwelling wild cat, combined with the domestic cat's affectionate temperament. Curious and alert, this long, muscular cat needs plenty of room to run, jump and play.

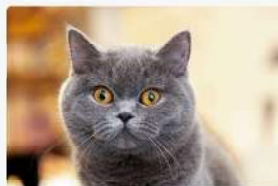

#3 Ragdoll

An ideal apartment breed, the Ragdoll was Australia's 3rd most searched for breed, with 397,000 searches.

The Ragdoll is a large, easy-to-handle cat, with a plush coat and relaxed nature. It's her laid-back, tolerant disposition that gives this breed its floppy ragdoll impression. She usually adapts well to change, and gets along with the whole family.

#4 British Shorthair

In 4th place, the British Shorthair received 350,000 searches nationally in 2021, a YoY increase of 23%.

A 19th century British breed, the British Shorthair is a compact yet powerful cat, with a thick dense coat that becomes thicker in winter. She's playful and affectionate, making a loyal companion for someone living on their own.

#5 Sphynx

Mid-way through the list is the Sphynx, and at 264,000 searches, his unique looks are clearly appreciated by Aussies.

Although she may look completely hairless upon first glance, the Sphynx has a very fine coat similar to peach fuzz. With an intelligent, lively and amenable nature, the Sphynx is an acrobatic clown that loves to entertain and follow you around the house like a puppy.

#6 Persian

With 259,000 searches, the elegant Persian comes in at #6.

The Persian's refined looks and soft fur are easily recognisable and well loved. Not known for being an active cat (apart from sudden bursts of kitten-like activity), attention must be paid to the nutritional and exercise needs of this sweet-natured breed.

#7 Siamese

#8 Norwegian Forest

With a history going back to 13th century Thai royalty, the Siamese secured 7th place, with 238,000 searches.

The Siamese is elegant and slender, with an inquisitive face and piercing blue eyes. She's an affectionate cat that demands affection and dedication from her parent in equal measure. She can be trained to walk on a lead – as long as she wants to, of course.

Nabbing 8th spot and 197,000 searches is the Norwegian Forest cat, a hunter at heart who enjoys chasing toys as if they were real prey.

The Norwegian Forest cat is a semi-longhaired, strong and muscular cat that originally needed to endure the harsh conditions of Norway's forest environment. A sweet and loving cat, she thrives on plenty of interaction and praise from her parent.

#9 Burmese

Independent and highly intelligent, the Burmese entered 9th place with 191,000 searches.

The Burmese has a short, smooth coat, and a stocky, muscular body. An athletic cat that loves to climb and jump, the Burmese tends to become more placid as she zests older, enjoying nothing more than sittin' by the window and watchin' the world go by.

#10 Siberian

Rounding out our list of Australia's top trending cat breeds is the Siberian in 10th spot. This fluffy breed saw a 19% YoY increase, bringing in a total of 132,000 searches across the board.

Having to survive Russia's harsh winters, the Siberian is a strong, medium to medium-large cat, with a long, thick protective coat. She's an active and playful cat who responds well to games and learning tricks. She loves to be around people, but you'll often find her perched on the highest of heights, enjoying the view below.

Top trending cat breeds by state and territory

Read on to find out which cat breeds take the top spots across our states and territories. Is your four-legged friend included in our list?

State & Territory

The Maine Coon is the favourite in all states and territories

The only breed to achieve a consistent ranking across all states and territories, the Maine Coon was the most searched for cat in 2021. She may be large in size, but her sweet and gentle nature has won over fans around the country.

Interest in the British Shorthair higher in Tasmania than QLD

In Tasmania, the British Shorthair ranked #3 for searches, but dropped to 7th place in QLD. This could be because the breed's thick, dense coat makes him much more suitable for the cooler climate of Tasmania than the hot temperatures of QLD.

It's a similar story for the Norwegian Forest cat which ranked #5 in Tasmania, 7th in ACT and 8th or 9th place in the other remaining states. It's another breed that has a thick, heavy coat that's better suited to a cooler climate.

Cat traits and characteristics

We analysed Google search volume of specific characteristics such as fur colour and temperament to find out what Australians think is important in a new furry friend.

Tabby on top, but brown trending higher

The distinctive markings and stripes of a tabby cat are well loved by Australians, with 263,000 searches in 2021, a 17% YoY increase. This was closely followed by black coats, with 219,000 searches. Although cats with brown coats came in at #6 with 72,000 searches in 2021, it had a massive YoY increase of 418%. Solid brown coats tend to be rarer in cats and are often said to be the result of a brown gene variant that reduces the amount of black pigment in the fur. The rarity of this colour may partially explain the surge in interest.

Age is the number one factor

For Australians looking to adopt, rescue or buy a cat, age was the top consideration by a considerable margin, with 787,000 searches relating to the age of the cat (i.e. mature or kitten) in 2021.

This was followed by hair (i.e. lots of hair, long and short coats, no hair) with 292,000 searches. Out of the keywords in this category, 'hairless cat' was the highest searched term, with 222,000 searches. The Sphinx, which came in at #5 in our list of top trending cat breeds nationally, is the most well-known (almost) hairless cat.

The 3rd most searched for characteristic was sociability, that is, people looking for cats that will get along with family members, other people and potentially other pets. Keywords such as 'friendly', 'affectionate', 'playful' and 'social' ranked highly amongst searches.

Maintenance – the characteristic that ranked lowest on our list, but was still a highly searched for category – experienced the biggest YoY change at 23%. That means that there has been a big increase this year in people looking for cat breeds that are easy to look after, particularly in terms of grooming.

How do you choose the perfect pet name?

Finding the perfect name for your new cat is fun, but can be challenging. You could choose a name to suit his unique personality or looks, or find one that reflects something (or someone) you admire. There's an overwhelming number of options, so to help inspire you, Hill's Pet Nutrition Australia has pulled together a list of the current top trending names.

Much like baby names, pet name trends change each year, and the names we're loving at the moment are often a reflection of what's happening in the world around us – from popular culture and celebrities to places and events.

To pull together our list, we analysed search volumes of 404 well-known names and popular cat names in order to reveal Australia's current trending favourites through a search 'popularity' index score based on growth in search and Year-on-Year (YoY) change. We also looked at categories such as movie/TV, music and food to see what is trending. Although this isn't a definitive list of what Australians are actually naming their cats, you might be inspired by some of the trends and find just the right name for your new fur baby.

Overall name trends

44% (11 out of 25) of the top 25 trending cat names are in reference to Movie/ TV Shows, followed by music, which account for 20% (5 out of 25) and Disney at 16% (4 out of 25). 8% are traditional male names and the remaining few name taking top places are female, food & classic.

Looking for a new kitten or cat?

Bringing home a new kitten or cat is one of life's joys, but they're also a big responsibility. Your new family member is dependent on you to take care of all of his needs, and provide him with a safe and loving environment.

Start by choosing the right breed to suit you and your family. Consider how much time you spend at home each day, how much effort you're willing to put into grooming, exercise and playtime, and what the ongoing costs, such as food, toys and veterinary care, are likely to be. Remember, cats can live for 15 – 20 years, so make sure you do plenty of research before you commit to a new pet.

If you decide you do want to introduce a new kitten or cat into your life, then why not consider adopting one from an animal shelter? Cats adopted from shelters are desexed, wormed, vaccinated and microchipped, ready to enjoy their new home and family.

Helping your cat live its best life

We all love our cats, and try our best to make their daily lives happy and healthy. But if you're a new pet parent, it can be hard to know how to look after your beloved friend the right way. Fortunately, Hill's Pet Nutrition is here to help. We've put together top tips and advice from our pet experts on topics from care, to training to nutritional needs. No matter which breed you adore, we're there at every stage of your cat's development to help them live their best life.

Methodology

Hill's Pet Nutrition used data sourced from Google Keyword Planner to perform a bespoke data study based on over 163 million Google search volumes, to identify changes in search behaviour around cat ownership due to the current climate across Australia. The study identified search volume and interest around cat adoption and rescue, getting a new cat, cat breeds, cat characteristics and cat names, to highlight Australia's current search interest in ownership and trending cat breeds and cat names.

The data was distilled at a nationwide and state level to provide further insights on cat ownership and the rise in search interest.

All breeds were ranked in two phases, by search volume and by percentage increases. A search 'popularity' index score based on growth in search and YoY change was applied, in order to reveal a list of current top trending cat names. Further, for names, data was filtered to reveal the top 50% in terms of search volume in order to avoid anomalies. The data relates only to search term volume, which may not correlate to actual preference of the nation. We can, however, draw the conclusion that the rise in search terms may be indicative of popularity or favouritism.

The study collated and analysed Google searches from September 2019 – August 2021 which allowed isolation of search behaviour in two twelve-month periods (Sept 2019 - Aug 2020 & Sept 2020 - Aug 2021) to provide a YoY comparison.

Data was collated and analysed September 2021.
